The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) prohibits discrimination in all its programs and activities on the basis of race, color, national origin, sex, religion, age, disability, political beliefs, sexual orientation, or marital or family status. (Not all prohibited bases apply to all programs.) Persons with disabilities who require alternative means for communication of program information (Braille, large print, audiotape, etc.) should contact USDA's TARGET Center at (202) 720-2600 (voice and TDD).

To file a complaint of discrimination, write USDA, Director, Office of Civil Rights, Room 326-W, Whitten Building, 14th and Independence Avenue, SW, Washington, DC 20250-9410 or call (202) 720-5964 (voice and TDD). USDA is an equal opportunity provider and employer.

Introduction

Direct marketing of farm products through farmers markets continues to be an important outlet for small agricultural producers nationwide. Farmers markets, now an integral part in the urban/farm linkage, have continued to rise in popularity, mostly due to the growing consumer interest in direct marketing. Through this type of direct marketing, both farmers and consumers benefit. While farmers are afforded the opportunity to thrive in their businesses by supplementing their farm income, consumers have access to locally grown, farm-fresh products and the opportunity to personally interact with the farmer who grows the produce.

The number of markets operating in the United States has continued to increase since this data was last reported in 1998. The 2000 National Farmers Market Directory documents 2,863 farmers markets now operating in the United States, an astonishing increase from 1,755 markets in 1994 when USDA began collecting the data.

Farmers markets, as presented in this directory, are defined as a group of farmers and vendors leasing or renting space in a common facility/site on a temporary basis with an emphasis on the sale of fresh farm products and other locally produced items. This directory is intended to provide an informative resource for farmers, operators, consumers, and the general public. The directory lists markets by name, location, contact person, telephone number, and type of operation (open-air/seasonal or year-round) and points out markets that accept WIC (Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children) coupons. Year-round generally (but not always) denotes that some type of covered facilities exist at the market site. The address of a market listed in this publication usually depicts market location and does not necessarily represent a complete mailing address. Therefore, attempts to contact markets listed in this directory should be made by telephone or e-mail, if possible. The reader may note that, in some instances, either the names of contact persons are missing or no phone number is listed. However, all information received from State departments of agriculture and farmers market organizations has been included in the directory.

The directory will be published biennially and updated continuously on the website. Suggestions, comments, or market data corrections may be submitted to the following address:
